Historical Context: These buildings probably date from c1900 and later (probably c1930s). The earliest buildings on the site date from c1894 and were built for the Army Gymnastic Staff, founded in 1860, as part of the rebuilding of the first temporary camps. The first of 3 similar gyms at Aldershot including the Maida Gym (Grade listed), the second generation of army gyms, built to develop gymnastics to improve the condition of the soldiers. These ancillary buildings form part of the important Physical Training Centre group and are of evidential and historic significance due to this relationship. Sources: Oldfield E A L: Army Gymnastic Staff- 1952-: 5; Childerhouse T: Military Aldershot, the first fifty years: London: 1990-). Any Further Comments:
These buildings are not included in the descriptions of the two statutory listed buildings on the site although they would be protected by virtue of their physical connection to these Grade II listed buildings. Inclusion on the local list gives them additional special local interest in their own right.
